Transparency Market Research Reports included a detailed market survey and analysis trends on “Diabetic Food Market”. This report also includes more info about basic overview of the industry including definitions, applications and global market industry structure.

Large diabetic population is a major driver for the global diabetic food market. In 2013, around 347 million people were diabetic worldwide. Other major factors contributing to market growth are increasing health awareness and rising obesity levels. The people who are not diabetic also consume diabetic products as precautionary measures of getting diabetic. Different type of ‘reduced sugar and carbohydrate’ food products are available under diabetic foods segment. Packaged food that are labelled as ‘low in sugar’, ‘suitable for diabetics’ and containing carbohydrates that do not cause a large rise in blood glucose, are most promising market segments.

Traditionally, diabetic products were distributed through chemist, drug stores and health food stores. The scenario has changed, as these products are now available in supermarkets and hypermarkets. As the number of consumers with diabetes rises, naturally health foods, in both packaged and non-packaged formats, will also benefit from diabetic trends. The medical image of diabetic products is also often unappealing to consumers. The developed countries, such as the U.S., the U.K., Germany and France are the dominant market shareholders. Some of the major companies operating in the market are Nestle, Coca-Cola, PepsiCo, Mars, Cadbury, Kellogg, Unilever and Golden Farm Candies.
